We had a both just outside of the library where we shared ideas on how to live more greenly and collected recyclables!

Supernatural Summer Reads

If you plan on hanging around Marshall this summer, make sure you find the time to join Murrell Library's "Supernatural Summer Reads" literacy program throughout June and July. I know what you're thinking, but this is no ordinary reading literacy program!

"Supernatural Summer Reads" is a series where paranormal literature will be discussed traditionally once a week for eight weeks and electronically via Facebook and Twitter throughout the summer. On top of book discussions there will be visits from local historians who will shed some light on Marshall's notoriously haunted spots and even one of the authors will stop by and divulge important tricks and tips for experiencing and understanding the unexplainable. There is even a fieldtrip scheduled to a notoriously haunted spot for interested group members.

Doesn't all of this sound spectacularly spooky? Well, it gets better! "Supernatural Summer Reads" is FREE and open to the public, all you have to do is register! Use the online registration button located on the library's main page (www.moval.edu/library).

Don't let this opportunity pass you by, register today! After all it just might haunt you... For more information contact Norine Gaskill at gaskilln@moval.edu or email the library at library@moval.edu.

Above is the first book selection for the summer reads program.

To the left is Jason Offutt, the author scheduled to visit.

EYE Murrell Library will be open 'til MID-NIGHT May 3 & 4 (Monday & Tuesday)

Ask Libby the Librarian

Dear Libby,

I have a slight problem. See, I've done my best to present myself as this exotic international student from Caracas... and... well, I'm not. I know this doesn't sound like a problem, but it is! See, it worked. Yes, it worked, people believe me! And I even have a super hot boyfriend because of my "exotic nature," but I need to break up with him because he wants to go home with me for the summer... and home is in Wichita, KS.

Coming clean isn't an option! What should I do?

The Venezuelan

Dear Venezuelan,

People often say life's what you make it, but oh my you've really gone above and beyond!

You could either tell him your father would flip if he knew you were in a relationship, because you are betrothed to a very wealthy socialite... or you can come clean and tell him the truth.

Good luck! Enjoy your summer in Wichita!

Local,
Libby
