College graduates with a degree in history have valuable skills to sell in today's job market; they know how to do research and gather information, write well, analyze facts, and make sense of change and trends. This is useful in a variety of fields, including journalism, law, business, politics, teaching, and writing. A degree in history is also a great place to start if you want to pursue a master's degree in law, journalism, archival science, librarianship, teaching, and, of course, history.

Why a degree in History from Missouri Valley?

The MVC history program is an integral part of the college's liberal arts mission that focuses on scholarship, intellectual inquiry and academic excellence. Knowledge of history allows you to exercise intelligently the values of compassion, diversity, social responsibility, integrity and accountability. The program is demanding; sharpening your reading, writing, and critical thinking skills and exposing you to a wide range of cultural, economic, political and social issues and ideas. By learning about historical circumstances, choices, actions, and events, you'll place your own experiences in a historic context and learn to analyze the choices you face.
